

La Costa's Brittany Clotfelter gives girls' beauty brands a run for their sparkly money.

[BEAUTY BEAT] STAR STYLIST TAKES CARLSBAD!

This fall, a Manhattan salon-to-the-socialites hits NorCo. The famed Mark Garrison is slated to open in November at the Four Seasons Aviara in the former José Eber spot, and it'll be the first location outside of its flagship. "If you can count the stripes in the hair, something's wrong," says color guru Garrison, who clearly has his work cut out for him in S.D. Get on the books now. 7100

Four Seasons Point, Carlsbad, 760.603.6800. >>> It's official: there is no right age for glitter. "My daughter came home from a party with colorful makeup that made her break out," says Brittany Clotfelter, whose Glory for Girls natural skincare line launches this month. La Costa's Clotfelter is a former marketing consultant for biggies like Microsoft—and is the fashionable mum to daughters Remy, 11, and Reece, 4, and son Treat, 9. The cleansers, lotions and lip balm eschew those ubiquitous toxic chemicals and similarly reject the over-the-top cotton-candy aesthetic that bedevils so many girls' brands. www.gloryforgirls.com. >>> Spa week returns! From September 15-21, spas across S.D., including Pukalani in Del Mar and the Catamaran Spa, will be offering select treatments for $50. www.spaweek.org.