Fall's in full swing — and the brand new trends are just rolling in! From a hot fashion line affordable on a budget to a skincare line that's stamped with a green seal of approval, everything's got a creative twist. There's a video game that's like no other, an awesome watch sure to turn heads, and a book that will change your view on life in just a few words. Plus there's entertainment! From a movie full of girl power, to one full of girls fighting; and a new musician who's already got all the girls screaming! Add in tasty celeb-endorsed gum flavors and a fun tech gadget and you've got an October that's totally falling into history as one of the most buzzed about yet!

Beauty: Glory for Girls

Tired of all those beauty products that claim they'll make your skin radiate and shine, but actually cause breakouts? Glory for Girls puts an end to that with its completely natural and organic skin care line designed specifically for young adults that guarantees no artificial colors or ingredients. Plus every item in the line is environmentally friendly — the formulas are biodegradable and packaging is made out of recyclable plastic. Give the line a test run with the Glory to Go kit (pictured, $14, gloryforgirls.com) to get a taste of the everyday face & body wash, everyday face & body lotion, everyday clarifying lotion, and the all the time sunscreen in SPF17. In no time you'll be shouting hallelujah and saluting Glory for Girls all the way!

Music: Owl City

Adam Young went from composing songs in his Owatonna, Minnesota, basement to the top of the music charts under his one-man band moniker of Owl City in no time — and won celebrity fans along the way (Taylor Swift was recently spotted at his New York City show and recently tweeted, "Watching the video for 'Fireflies' by @owlcity over and over again.") And the 23-year-old is just getting started. His album Ocean Eyes debuted on the Billboard album chart at 27 and his single "Fireflies" is currently Top 5 on iTunes. With a soothing voice mixed with innovative electronica beats plus a pop mentality, Owl City is well on its way to being one of the most popular destination spots in music history.
